

TMKG Retained by “Keadle for Congress”; North Carolina Campaign Taps Amanda Kornegay to Direct National Fundraising Efforts

For Immediate Release

WASHINGTON, D.C. (October 15, 2009) – The Macsata-Kornegay Group, Inc. today announced that it has been retained by the “Keadle for Congress” campaign in the Republican primary for North Carolina’s 10th Congressional District. Scott Keadle is challenging incumbent Representative Patrick McHenry.

The Republican primary represents the election observers are watching because more than 60 percent of the District’s registered voters are Republican.

“Scott’s campaign embodies the movement behind the growing unvoiced majority in NC-10, as well as across the country,” said Amanda Kornegay, Partner for The Macsata-Kornegay Group, Inc. “We’re confident that Scott’s insurgency campaign is well-positioned to raise the significant amount of money needed to fund his campaign against the political establishment. Our firm is grateful for the opportunity to raise money for a true businessman interested in going to Washington on behalf of Main Street instead of Wall Street.”

In 2008, Keadle was elected to the Iredell County Board of Commissioners, and quickly established himself as an effective conservative leader who is not afraid to fight the establishment when necessary. As a freshman on the board, Commissioner Keadle has refused to sit on the sidelines or wait his turn to lead. Scott has used calm reason and logic to achieve many conservative successes, and has zealously insisted on a fair, open and ethical government. Keadle has insisted on a balanced budget, and negotiated an amendment to the budget bill that saved taxpayers millions of dollars.
